The 1966 Anlibrum is being presented in the form of a novel, The New Elmhurst. The opening section discloses the setting of the novel. Student life, the paths which students follow when not in school, is revealed in the novel's mood. Academics, the most essential part of school, constitutes the plot, and the organizations, which build character and create a well-rounded student, present the sub-plot of the novel. The exciting clash of athletic rivalry between the mighty Trojans and their opponents provide the conflict. Every novel thrives on characters. The ever-important faculty assumes the position of lead characters, and the underclassmen form the remainder of the characters. The climax of the novel rests in the hands of the seniors who have successfully completed a formidable and important part of their lives. Their life at Elmhurst ends on a note of accomplishment as they proceed down the aisle to receive their well earned diplomas.

Books cannot be killed by fire. People die . . . but books can never die. There is no force on earth that can abolish memory. Like a good novel, the knowledge gained from education is something that will never perish.

The fine education which Elmhurst students received was the product of a single factor, the devoted faculty. Offering assistance whenever it was needed, the teachers enabled Trojan teens to grow in knowledge and as a person. They sacrificed much of their spare time to sponsor clubs and promote school spirit. Together with the students, they filled the pages of the book of life.

Bustling holls are echoing,
For we are gathered here.

The wonderful scent of "newness" was everywhere. A bright new frame for the ever-widening circle of lively faces—dignified seniors, jaunty juniors, strange resolute sophomores aching to be a part of the old, but thrilled with the new, 1160 in all. Yet, the old familiar scenes and activities prevailed, building the foundation upon which Elmhurst has stood for over a quarter of a century. Despite the many innovations, the steadfast traditions remained unchanged, and altogether Elmhurst's students walked down the halls projecting their best efforts, knowing that their dreams for tomorrow would even surpass the memories of yesterday and the realities of today.

Another innovation at Elmhurst is the transference of the main entrance which used to be off Ardmore Avenue.

An established organization for girls interested in athletics is GAA. Here, two members enjoy the rigorous activity of horseback riding.

Older study facilities reveal that "lived-in" look, providing students with a familiar atmosphere in which to work.

MOOD

The mood of The New Elmhurst varied as did its characters. A feeling of anticipation and excitement prevailed as students anxiously awaited the eve of the Junior Prom. Part-time work consumed many hours after school for the busy teens who earned money to spend or to save for their college education. Volunteer work, though not rewarded monetarily, gave a large number of Trojans an undefinable sense of satisfaction and accomplishment. Elmhurst scholars spent much of their time concentrating on homework. Trips to the library for term paper material and reviewing for tests constituted numerous hours. EHS teens, like all other American youths, looked forward to the moments of leisure which they managed to squeeze into their busy schedules. Attached to each activity was a memory, and each memory played its part in making up the year 1965-66, setting it off as an outstanding and a memorable one.

Assuming the responsibilities of a hall monitor, Catie Greenler reviews for a test at her post.

Studying is a valuable asset to every student's school life. Here Suzanne Ketzler completes her sociology work.

E H S teens devote time to preparing assignments

The churning of thought waves alivened an otherwise silent room. The mood was wondering, anticipating, eager, and very apprehensive.

Pencils scratched, pens glided, pages were scanned, notebooks were filled, questions were answered, problems solved and knowledge attained.

Many times during the year, lamps were left burning until the wee hours of the morning, until that chapter in social studies was read one last time. Lab reports were to be turned in, English essays were completed, term papers were due and then wearily to bed . . .

Satisfaction, learning, and extra money were the main motives of the many Trojans who had part-time jobs.

But a part-time job meant much more than just this to each student who occupied his time in this manner. The personal experience gained from a part-time job was almost as invaluable as formal education. It taught responsibility, imparted an increased sense of value, and made the student aware of the huge importance of human relations. Students came in contact with the business world and learned the importance of competition. They realized that to keep their job meant to strive for perfection in doing it.

and to working at part-time jobs to earn extra money

Gaining secretarial experience, Connie Spurlock works as a receptionist on weekends.

Taking inventory at a drugstore is one of the jobs Dan Kelley does to earn extra savings money.

Students gain satisfaction through volunteer work

Participating in a rewarding experience, Carolyn Frech serves her community while working at Lutheran Hospital as a volunteer.

Happy satisfaction was the mood which filled the hearts of EHS teenagers who took time out of their busy schedules to serve their community. Many girls spent long hours serving as "candy strippers" in the local hospitals, or working at the State School. Y-Teen members cared for the children whose parents visited the "Christ Child Festival" during the Christmas season and gave an Easter Egg Hunt for the Allen County Children's Home. Students represented Elmhurst on the Allen County Safety Council and the High School Heart Board.

A large number of Trojans donated their efforts to aiding Elmhurst's busy faculty. FTA members used part of their spare time to grade papers for teachers. This service not only was appreciated by the teachers, but gave the club members a chance to gain useful experience for their future professions. Others assisted by collecting absence slips and helping in the office. An extremely important job at Elmhurst was that of being a hall monitor. Their duty was to assist any visitors who were in the school building and see that order was kept in the halls.

Volunteering her time, Karen Volz gives two Saturdays a month to work with children at the Fort Wayne State School.

Susie Exner and Greg Pease of the Allen County Teenage Safety Council accept an award for exceptional safety practices.

Rehearsing diligently, Trojan actors and actresses practice for the opening night of "My Fair Lady".

"At last!" sighed Elmhurst students when the time came to break the routine of serious study and enjoy a few moments of fun and excitement. Each afternoon for four long weeks strains of "On the Street Where You Live" rang out from the stage as amateur actors and actresses rehearsed for the fall production of "My Fair Lady." Friday pep sessions led by the spirited cheerleaders gave the student body a chance to unite and boost their team to victory saying, "Trojans, we're backing you!" There is no simpler form of leisure than conversation, and though it is supposedly a gift given to females, the masculine population of Elmhurst seemed to be quite endowed with it. Every weekend, dates, basketball and football games, record hops, and parties provided recreation and relaxation for the teens who had studied and worked so hard throughout the week. Whatever the activity, the mood of the leisure time of most Trojans was one of happiness and contentment.

and extracurricular activities in the new atmosphere

Enjoying the conveniences of the new cafeteria, students gather with their friends at noon to eat their lunch and to discuss the latest news.

Inexpensive and fun-filled pastimes provide Trojans

Still sensing the excitement or disappointment of the night's game, Trojan teens meet at Dale's for a coke.

After school hours Elmhurst teens enjoyed various activities. Some had part-time jobs; some Trojans tried to keep chores, such as washing cars, shoveling snow, raking leaves, or other household tasks to a minimum (ask any father or mother)! The rest of the time was packed full of fun. It was popular for girls to have their own cycles and go tooting around town. The boys spent hours at the pool tables. Some boys professed to be excellent pool players, while others excelled at billiards, and still others just played for fun. Girls found the usual enjoyment in shopping.

Plenty of school spirit was evident in the attendance at the football and basketball games, the meeting place for socializing with friends and watching the team in action. Athletic events never ended the evening—there was always a get together, dance, party, or a gang of kids at Dale's.

Talented Trojans spent their spare time practicing musical instruments with a combo or a band, earning extra money by playing at dances. Other Elmhurst students just loafed or spent hours on the phone talking to that special someone. Wherever a group gathered, noise filled the air, merriment kept the "joint jumpin' ". Whether work or play, these moments provided Trojans with plenty of fun and laughter.

Moments became memories—memories became happiness.

On a Saturday night date, Dave Anglin opens the door for Rosie Herber as they enter one of the local theaters.

Despite the freezing cold weather, many loyal Trojans come to the football games to help boost the team.

Spending time with friends, going on dates, or working

Dancing to the latest popular records, Sharon Smith teaches foreign student Andres Vega some of the recent U.S. dances.

Looking at different tuxedos, Dave Lorenz, Mike Downie, and Thayne Sterling discuss what type they want to rent for the prom.

Ordering a corsage to match his date's dress, Thayne Sterling finds that it is an essential part of every prom.

“Portals of Fantasy” prom remains in teens’ memories

The Junior Prom is always one of the highlights of high school, and the class of 1966 made sure that their prom was no exception. “Portals of Fantasy” will long be remembered as an enchanted evening. Starry-eyed couples began drifting in at nine o’clock. Unbelievably, they entered the gymnasium which had been converted into a beautiful ballroom. Shades of pale pink formed a ceiling, and two portals formed the background for Ken Truman and The Trends, who provided the evening’s music. The stage was transformed into a forest with a castle nestled among the trees. This design provided a perfect setting for the coronation of Queen Charlotte McKay and the presentation of her Court. All were attired in gowns of blue and the Queen wore white.

A wonderful evening was brought to conclusion with the after prom party at Lighted Acres. A buffet lunch was served and teens danced to the tunes of The Epics. Weary and sleepy-eyed, they headed for home, each cherishing the memories of an unforgettable evening.

Dancing to the music of Ken Truman and The Trends, couples assume a more sedate pace than they normally do.

To be chosen as a member of the prom court is a dream of many girls. Ruling with graciousness, the members of the 1965 Junior Prom Court are Sharon Smith, Barbara Venis, Mary Ann Eickoff, Queen Charlotte McKay, Ginger Yergens, Susan Exner, and Dianne Abbott.

PLOT

The plot is undoubtedly the most essential part of a novel. Likewise, academics is the most important part of high school, and academics was truly the plot in which the characters of The New Elmhurst involved themselves. Although students did not limit themselves to studying only, they realized that their scholastic work was the key to becoming a more intelligent person, and that the knowledge which they gained would assist them in reaching the goals which they had set. Each Trojan accepted the fact that success which he hoped for would be obtained simply by hard work and perseverance.

Elmhurst offered an extensive curriculum to prepare its students for the future, and new facilities made learning easier and more enjoyable. Physics and chemistry pursuers had access to beautifully equipped laboratories. Girls interested in home economics learned the fundamentals of cooking and sewing amidst shiny new cabinets and appliances. Vocalists found that their tones sounded much more pleasing in the fresh choir room. The enlargement of the school library furnished a storehouse of knowledge which was readily available. With the opportunities which Elmhurst offered, the outcome of the "plot" of Trojan students was decided by only one person, the student himself.

American, English, and modern world literature, plus

English is the sole means of communication of our nation. Thus, success may depend largely upon our understanding and knowledge of the English language.

In order to give the students this necessary amount of learning, Elmhurst English classes covered a variety of important areas. Diagramming sentences aided underclassmen in familiarizing themselves with the parts of speech. To help students express their written work better, the proper structure of paragraphs was studied. The key to interesting writing and speaking is a large vocabulary, and Trojans were required to learn correct spelling, pronunciation, and definition of many words in order to insure a more intensive vocabulary.

Literature was also stressed as a significant aspect of the English curriculum. Sophomores studied American literature and read such works as Thornton Wilder's drama Our Town. Concentrating on English literature juniors made a thorough analysis of Shakespeare's Macbeth. Seniors centered their attention on the study of modern literature and comparative dramas.

Displaying artwork drawn in connection with the study of Silas Marner are sophomores Lory Billiard and Zana Zeigler.

The students in Mrs. Oberlin's seventh period senior English class find themselves busily correcting themes.

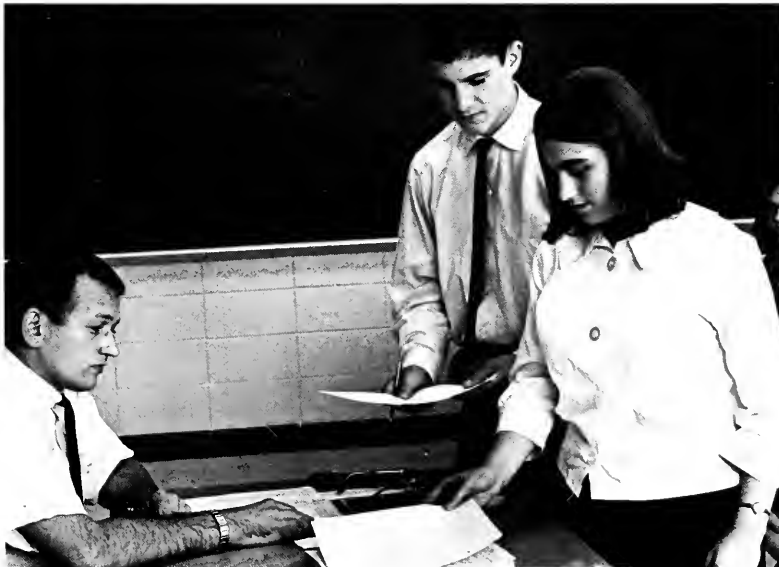

Participating in a pre-test questioning session are the juniors in Mr. Meyer's seventh period English class.

theme composing occupies the focal point in English

Depicting a witches' scene in Macbeth are juniors Myra Ping, Clare Shoaff, and Sue Dettmer. These juniors found that acting out certain parts of the play added to their understanding of Shakespeare's subtle meanings and to their appreciation of his artistry.

Handing in papers to be left to the careful scrutiny of Mr. Eytcheson, are sophomores Bruce Merchant and Sharon Kraft.

Discoveries of past and present scientists help to

Using a stroboscope and trying to retard the motion of a metal disk are senior, Mike Carroll and sophomore, Diane Sarles.

Laboratory sciences taught Elmhurst students to think and analyze problems. Through keen observation, and theorization, science students learned to draw valid conclusions.

New laboratories and modern equipment provided students with a challenging atmosphere. New editions of books supplied students with the latest scientific facts.

There was a variety of science courses offered at Elmhurst. The old physics course was revised into the Physical Science Study Committee course. This PSSC course was comprised of the study of kinetics and energy velocity. Students gained knowledge by analyzing experiments.

The construction of matter was the basic idea behind chemistry. Compounds were broken down into elements. Students discovered that atoms were composed of neutrons, protons, and electrons.

Biology illustrated man's relationship in nature. Students learned about the human body—its bones, muscles, and all its complex parts, while they also learned about the simple one celled organisms.

Pointing out one student's insect collection, Mrs. Bleke shows Karen Ort the characteristics of the class Insecta.

make life much easier for would-be experimenters

Aided by a cell battery, Sandee Hornberger, Susie Brown, Dave anglin, and Marcia Murphy perform a physics experiment. Mr. Master-son's two classes used laboratory periods at various times in order to supplement their knowledge of different phases of science.

In order to find out about atomic structure, the students in Mr. Masterson's class read their textbook assignment with care.

From Algebra I to senior mathematics, students learn Mathematics is a challenging subject which furnishes a foundation for many technical and professional skills. It is essential to the business and commercial world and is necessary for engineering. Mathematics covers a broad range of courses from the fundamental general math to the difficult trigonometry.

The Mathematics Department at Elmhurst included, besides these two courses, Algebra I, Algebra II, plane geometry and solid geometry. Algebra conveyed the principles of solving equations for an unknown value, while geometry dealt with the proving of theorems and their application to geometric problems. This year a revised senior math course was offered to students. It included a six-week study of solid geometry and a more intensive concentration on trigonometry. Concluding the course was an introduction to calculus.

Industriously listening for the assignment from Mr. Reed are the students in his second period Algebra I class.

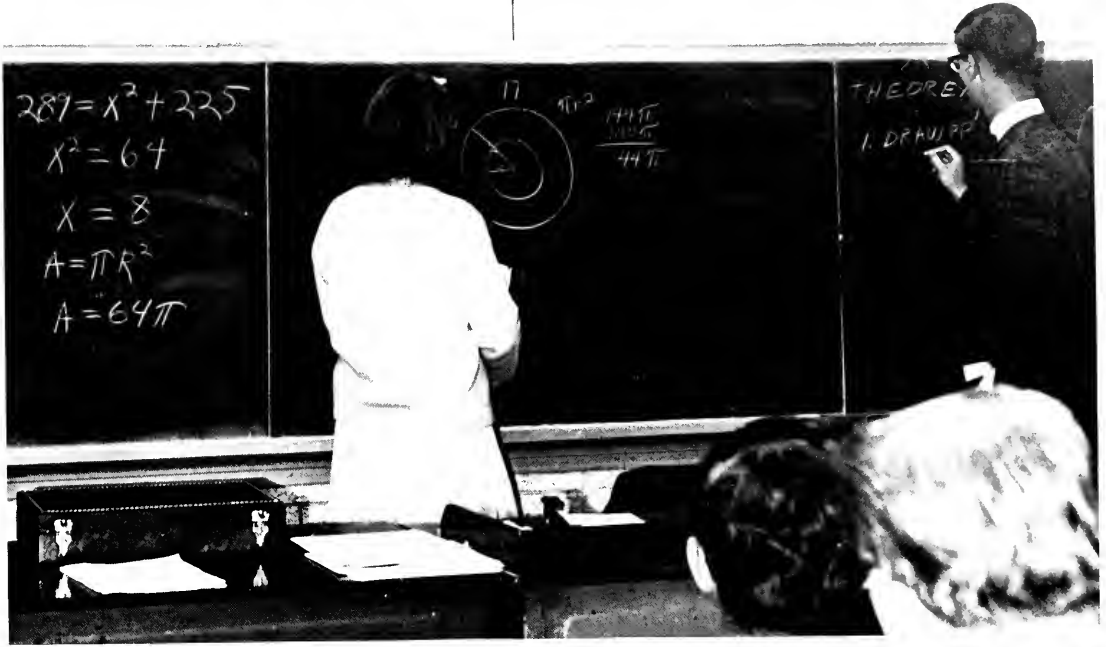

Trying to instill in students the principles of Euclidean Geometry, Mr. Masterson starts out with basic facts.

Explaining the relationships of the sides and angles of a triangle, Mr. Garrett uses plastic models for illustration.

to measure the world and the universe around them

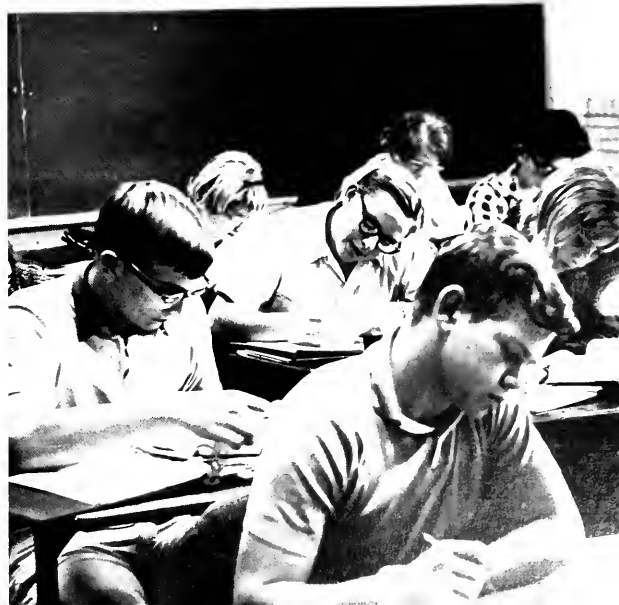

In Mr. Poor's afternoon senior math class, students Beth Squires, and Larry Palguta demonstrate how to solve their problems. A revised course this year, senior math included trigonometry, solid geometry, and an introduction to calculus.

To prepare for college, Mr. Garrett's Algebra II class studies hard and prepares the daily assignments in class.

In Mr. Hoover's class, the sophomores discover that they must apply their knowledge to different situations on a test.

Elmhurst's History Department seeks to make better

Everyone knows what history is until he begins to think about it. After that, nobody knows. Doesn't this sound familiar? "Why did Jefferson ask Congress to pass the Embargo Act? What influence did the Renaissance have in the Western world? How was the Great Glacier formed?"

Elmhurst students found the answers to these and many other questions by studying United States history, world history and geography. Students had the advantages of up-to-date textbooks, charts, and maps. World history taught customs and cultures of people from the Egyptian pyramids along the Nile to the launching of our nuclear powered missiles. Ancient times, medieval times, and modern times were studied. Students studied wars from Helen of Troy to our most recent war in Viet Nam. Dictators from Julius Caesar to Fidel Castro were investigated.

United States history pupils learned about America from Columbus to John Glenn, from the Mayflower to Project Gemini. Students learn the United States has had many great statesmen, who contributed to making the U.S. what it is today.

Plateaus, mountains, and oceans were the topics of many geography discussions. Students learned how the Great Glacier formed the levels of land that we have today.

Elmhurst students were studying about yesterday's history, living today's, and preparing for tomorrow's.

United States history conveys the manner in which our nation rose from a group of thirteen individual states to the most powerful country in the world. As an aid to this understanding in world history, Mr. Dilling points out the location of the countries on a map at the front of the room.

By writing out the chapter exercises, Mr. Heaston's sophomore world history students discover the relationships of world powers.

citizens by understanding the past and the present

Lecturing to his United States history class, Mr. Werling points out the importance of our country in the world's affairs.

While discussing the Civil War, Mr. Passwater lists secession as one of the sparks that kindled the flame of revolution.

Giving his second period class a chance to prove how much they know about the subject at hand, Mr. Miller distributes geography test papers.

Trying to help the juniors do their best, student teacher Miss Butler answers questions before a U.S. history test.

Preparing the names of the Latin cities for the future elections, Cheryl Kolb and Jim Hultquist work at a side desk.

Attempting to master German, these first year students find themselves busy studying, writing and speaking the language.

The sudden interest in America to study foreign languages has become a key to international understanding. Students who take a foreign language learn not only how to speak it correctly, but the nature and customs of the people who speak the language as their native tongue.

Newly added to the Language Department at Elmhurst was a first-year course in German. Next year, second-year German will be offered as well. Students were able to take four years of Latin. It proved a highly valuable course because many Latin words are similar to those of our own vocabulary, and Latin is used greatly in the field of medicine. Those interested in French could take three years, learning about the famed city of Paris, and Spanish students familiarized themselves with the habits of Latin American neighbors.

Elmhurst offers a variety of foreign languages; labs

Before the labs are available, Mrs. Foelber helps her seventh period Spanish II class learn by using a new method.

Using the blackboard for demonstration, Mr. Roberts, a new German teacher, answers student's questions concerning German time. This is one of many things first year students learn to gain a better understanding of the language and customs of Germany.

introduce newer methods of teaching and learning

By leading a discussion in French, Mr. Holt introduces new vocabulary words in order to prepare his students for greater comprehension.

In Latin class, Mr. Gerwig shows the students the correct way to write sentences and the proper words and conjugations to use.

Offered as a new course this year, Mr. Fryback's business law class meets every day during seventh period in Room 221.

In bookkeeping class, Mrs. Goble extends some aid and advice to student Karen Sheets who has a problem to be solved.

Students may choose from a wide business curriculum

Elmhurst students, as prospective secretaries, lawyers, accountants, and businessmen and women participated in the variety of business courses offered.

Typing, shorthand, business law, business math, bookkeeping, and office practice were included in the wide variety of courses. Typing, an essential course to anyone entering the world of business, not only prepared students for their vocations but also helped them to take notes in college.

In today's rapidly progressing world, businessmen and consumers need to be better informed than ever before. This was the purpose for business law. Business math was offered for students who did not take algebra or plane geometry, but wished to continue their study of math. Students interested in becoming stenographers studied shorthand. Office practice provided an excellent opportunity for girls who planned to be secretaries to gain experience, as well as assisting the busy office staff. Those who followed the business course prepared themselves for the commercial world.

By giving dictation to her shorthand class, Miss Edwards hopes to improve their efficiency, speed, and skill.

Using the last few minutes as study time in Mr. Bakle's business math class, students find they can get a head start on tomorrow's homework. They also can get an explanation or help with misunderstood problems which are discussed that day in class.

different choices cover diverse phases of business

Performing a school service and at the same time meeting the requirements of office practice are Alice Trautman and Karen Thomas.

Students in typing find that this skill helps not only in a career but also in composing reports and term papers for school.

Seniors complete requirements with various courses;

Upperclassmen prepared themselves to face the world's social, economic, and political problems by taking the required semester of government and an additional semester of either sociology, economics, or world affairs. Government provided an understanding of the democratic principles in which our nation believes, and revealed the responsibility which rests upon each American citizen to preserve this democracy. Sociology dealt with the personality characteristics of an individual and his role in society. Economics conveyed to seniors the financial history of the United States. This year was the first time a course in world affairs has been offered to Elmhurst students. Students taking this course became familiar with current events and world situations.

While debating about the voting age, Mr. Fowerbaugh gave all the students an opportunity to express their views.

Discovering the "how" and "why" of many international problems in the newspaper is Mr. Passwater's sixth period world affairs class.

Students gather information on prominent issues and discuss the importance of these happenings in the history of the world.

On Monday mornings, Mr. Miller's sociology classes have the opportunity to present their views in a panel discussion.

world affairs adds to the list of available subjects

After researching for supplementary material, Diane Taylor presents an extra report to Mr. Sinks government class.

Listening intently to Mr. Weber, Jim Merkey, John Ferguson, and John McGee learn important economic facts.

Discussing the Viet Nam situation, Mr. Fowerbaugh asks the members of the class to reveal their opinions on the subject.

Through speech, students learn how to communicate

During his speech, senior Don Cline finds that one of the best ways to judge the effectiveness of his talk is to note the reactions of the audience. In this picture, the students respond with various feelings and emotions to the subject about which he is speaking.

Students who participated in speech and debate were made to feel more comfortable and at ease. They were better informed on certain subjects and gained the important trait of self-confidence.

A debate consisted of two teams, one supported the affirmative side of the topic being debated and the other supported the negative or opposing side of the debate topic. Students gathered evidence to support their side and then combined their knowledge with that of their team members. Each team was given a certain number of minutes to illustrate their views. Questions were asked and rebuttals were made. Debates proved very interesting and informative.

Students were also required to write and deliver speeches, speaking in certain categories such as oratorical, dramatic or humorous. They were judged mainly on their speech presentation, and the material which it contained.

Both speech and debate provided students with a very rewarding experience, for the ability to express one's ideas and opinions is one of the major keys to success, and the poise which they acquired would prove invaluable in the future.

In Mr. Kemp's speech class, these future after-dinner speakers learn to present an interesting topic in an original manner.

When they play volleyball, the girls in physical education strive to use the correct procedures and the proper techniques.

Sportsmanship, coordination, and team cooperation were acquired by the Trojans who participated in physical education classes. Girls learned the basic rules of archery, volleyball, softball, tennis, and girls' basketball and then used their skills to play other teams in class. Boys kept physically fit by beginning class with a rigorous routine of calisthenics—sit-ups, pull-ups, push-ups, and jumping jacks. Following their warm-up period, they took part in such sports as wrestling, volleyball, basketball, baseball, and track. Both sexes gained a sense of competition and learned to work as a team, displaying good sportsmanship.

In physical education, the girls learned that playing volleyball can be made enjoyable as well as being trimming.

Trojans learn how to keep physically fit in the gym

In Mr. Bush's gym classes, boys perform directed calisthenics in order to keep physically fit.

Touching toes was one exercise these sophomore boys did to get in condition for gym class activities.

Looking far ahead to the future, girls take Home Ec

Finishing before the bell rings, Linda Volz and Vicki Squires clean up their kitchen to meet the requirements of Mrs. Deahl.

Preparing for the future was the main idea behind the home economics courses. Girls were taught cooking, sewing, family management, family living, and hospitality. Students gained knowledge through experience. The home economics course was designed to help girls acquire competency in planning, marketing, preparing foods, and sewing.

Students were encouraged to think critically and to apply principles of economics and human relationships to the problems of personal and home living. Making decisions and acquiring an increased sense of values were also important factors to be studied. Girls learned to work competently and make long ranged plans based on thoughtful consideration.

These future homemakers gained a rewarding experience in preparing for their goals in life.

New equipment provides the girls with a good dinette set on which to eat the meals they have prepared in completion of a project.

Besides producing fashionable garments for their wardrobes, the home economics girls become better seamstresses, future homemakers, and save money for themselves and their families. The skill and experience gained from this course is priceless.

To find their ability, students take industrial arts

Using a right angle ruler can be rather tricky, but pupil Mike Griffin seems to be doing a first-class job.

Improving his skill in wood class, student Scott Branstrator works hard at one of his many assigned projects.

An important part of any high school's program is vocational training. The boys who were interested in industrial arts were offered courses in metalworking, woodworking, and mechanical drawing. Metalworking students learned how to bend, shape, and mold useful metals and learned the principles of welding. Those who took woodworking were taught how to operate hand and power tools and to construct projects by using them. Mechanical drawing conveyed the principles of blueprint reading and drawing.

In Mr. Melchi's woodworking class, student Burt Baker tries his best to do a quality job on his project.

Sanding wood, as shown by George Colby, is just one of the many skills taught to the woodworking class.

Originality and creativity are found in art classes

Revealing her ability in stagecraft, Catie Greenler, senior, sketches numbers for an Elmhurst speech meet.

Assisting with a major project of the art class, Chuck Davis and Pat Bir help paint scenery for My Fair Lady.

Elmhurst students revealed their talents and also discovered that they could express their feelings and emotions by participating in art courses.

Students studied the great masters, Van Gogh, De Vinci, Raphael and others when they partook of art appreciation.

Creativeness of the individual student was evident as they painted with water colors, oils or temperas. Other kinds of art were done in colored chalk, India ink, crayon, wood, and clay.

No work was exactly the same, just as no two people are exactly the same. Each work expressed the artist's own individual feelings.

Two students in the art class, Pat Riley and Dee Dee Perry make costumes for the opening of a stage production.

Painting the balcony which is essential for one scene in My Fair Lady are Betty Johnson and Judy Cross.

Music appreciation aids understanding of culture

Giving their attention to Mr. Wieser, girls in the choir learn how to be better, more effective vocalists.

Culture plays a key role in America's society.

Realizing this, Elmhurst offered, for the second year, a music appreciation class. Students in the course studied various periods of music, associating specific types of music with each period. They familiarized themselves with the lives of many composers and learned to identify the works of these composers. They learned to recognize numerous musical instruments by both appearance and sound. Class members listened to many recordings, paying particular attention to the style and form of the music, and delved into the history of music. While gaining knowledge, they were impressed with the fact that other forms of music existed besides that popular among teenagers. Appreciation of famous compositions was stressed, and Elmhurst teens realized that music was an international language enjoyed by everyone.

Striving to better themselves, the Elmhurst band practice marching for an Elmhurst home football game.

Students taking instrumental music deduct time from their study hall to practice and become better musicians.

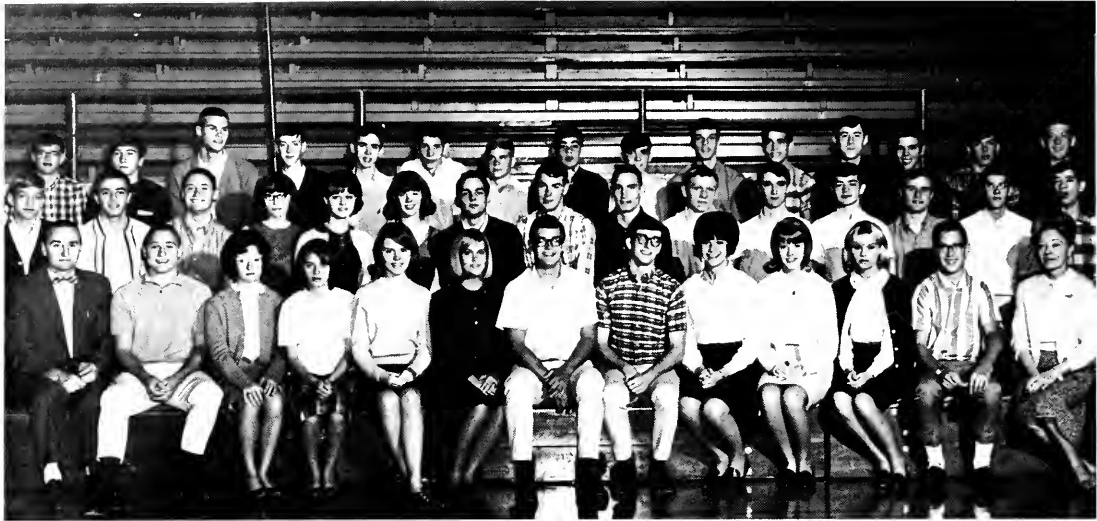

SUB-PLOT

The sub-plot of a novel is woven neatly into the main plot to provide an additional amount of action and information. Likewise, the extra-curricular activities available to the characters of The New Elmhurst furnished them with a means of gaining knowledge and experience, supplementing that which they received through their academic schedule.

Groups such as the Student Council, Red Cross Council, and Projectionists Club performed various services for the entire student body. Members of the Advance, Ilian, and Anlibrum staffs gained valuable experience in the field of journalism while providing fellow students with a preservation of the memories which characterized the year 1965-66. The Commercial, Home Ec, Phi-Chem, and Junior Classical Clubs aided those who were concentrating on each of these fields by providing information which was not received in class. The Booster Club and the band along with the cheerleaders and twirlers added color and excitement to the athletic contests.

Numerous other organizations designed to fit the interests of Trojan teenagers were also offered. Any or all of these clubs influenced the lives of many students, helping to make them a well-rounded individual and playing their part in the plot of The New Elmhurst.

Student Council continues to provide representation

The Elmhurst Student Council entered its third year as an active, constructive part of the student body, under the leadership of president, John Ferguson and faculty advisor, Mr. Robert Zimmerman. Its increased membership promoted many new ideas, and continued many previously formed projects.

A new Education Promotion Committee was formed which worked with the Future Teachers of America to aid potential dropouts and to help them overcome some of the difficulties they encountered. The responsibility of improving enthusiasm for athletic contests rested with the School Spirit Committee.

The sole money-making project of the Student Council was a candy sale. Over 4,000 boxes of candy were sold, making this a highly successful venture, and half the proceeds were contributed to the school's general fund.

The Student Council worked with many organizations to better Elmhurst and exercised all its energy to provide a bridge between the faculty and the student body, trying to satisfy both groups.

Selling sweat shirts was another worthwhile project sponsored by the Student Council.

Selling of candy was a new money making project innovated in which the entire student body participated.

Many committee meetings are contributing factors to the overall success of the Council's programs.

Advance debuts as weekly paper to set new precedent

The Elmhurst Advance entered its thirty-fifth year of successful publication. For the first time in its history, the Advance was published on a weekly basis in addition to becoming bigger in size under Mr. Don Lemish, Elmhurst's first full-time publication's advisor, and Cindy Sieminski, editor. Staff members before had to compose the paper in the library; however because of the new building, publication staffs were given a room.

The staff members celebrated National Newspaper Week by attending a luncheon at the Fort Wayne Newspaper building. They also attended Ball State Journalism Day.

The Advance was divided into two different departments, an editorial and business staff. The editorial division composed the copy and prepared the layout for the paper. The business staff collected the ads printed in the Advance and handled all the bookkeeping. In addition to these students, many other writers contributed their time and stories to help make the Advance successful.

Discussing game scores are John Grieser, sports writer, Thayne Sterling, assistant, and Doug Finlayson, sports editor.

Anilibrum staff works hard to make this year's "Annie"

Mr. Lemish, Anilibrum advisor, discusses yearbook policy with co-editors Gwen Gutmann and Marilyn Van Hoozen.

"This picture is cropped wrong!" "Who stole my pica ruler?" "We'll never make it!" These were familiar cries from the publications room as Anilibrum staff members, maintaining the high rating the 1965 staff earned, worked at least one hour a day on the yearbook. Near deadline time, a great deal of extra time was spent putting the finishing touches on the last few pages.

Staff members endeavored to construct a yearbook which would preserve the "firsts" in The New Elmhurst. They strived to produce a book that Trojan students would proudly display. The staff retained memories of the new classrooms, cafeteria, science and language labs, and library through carefully selected pictures. The section editors and staffs for student life, academics, faculty, sports, and album covered each phase of the lives of Elmhurst students. They planned pictures and wrote cutlines while the copy writers wrote the necessary copy.

Special color effects were used besides full color pictures. Final decisions and copyreading were done by co-editors Gwen Gutmann, Marilyn Van Hoozen, and the new publications advisor Mr. Donald Lemish.

Discussing layout plans are Cindy Pugsley, Joan Stauffer, activities editor, Sharon Schaller, and Nancy Wills.

Ilian returns for a second successful year under Imagination and creativeness were mixed in the Elmhurst Ilian. In this literary magazine, students had an opportunity to reveal their literary talents while expressing their opinions and personal ideas.

The Ilian contained the student's work concentrated in the areas of poetry, essays, and short stories. The staff consisted of Ginny Kerns, editor-in-chief. The production also included associate editor, financial manager, art editor, essay editor, short story editor, poetry editor, and respective staff members.

The assistant editors proofread the works and selected the finest manuscripts. These were submitted to the division editors for the final magazine selections.

Both the literary contributions from the student body and the combined efforts of the staff made the Ilian a treasure of high school literary works.

Red Cross Council employs its time in useful and Interest in others was the foundation for the majority of projects the Red Cross Council sponsored. The council is composed of twenty-four members, four boys and four girls from each class, who are elected when they are sophomores to serve for three years.

The group purchased the Anlibrum for foreign exchange student, Andrés Vega, as a gesture of goodwill. In early November members conducted the annual Red Cross Drive, a campaign originated to add to the American Red Cross Fund. During the Christmas season, the council not only decorated the school to instill a holiday atmosphere but assisted other city youths in decorating the Veteran's Hospital. In addition, it donated $100 worth of toys to the deserving "Toys for Tots" program.

Throughout the year, club members were responsible for Elmhurst's efficient hall monitor system. Members still found time for fun by sponsoring social activities and as in the service projects, they each helped to make the event successful and worthwhile.

Catie Greenler and Jane Bourie spare a few moments between classes to discuss the latest Red Cross project.

An impressive number of 130 girls joined Y-Teens this year. Affiliated with the Young Women's Christian Association, Y-Teens is an organization open to any sophomore, junior, or senior girl who desires to learn and serve others.

A variety of programs and projects composed the year's schedule, and members were able to earn a pin by obtaining 150 points and a letter by obtaining 300 points. The girls brought happiness to young hospital patients by making Thanksgiving tray favors, donating canned goods and giving an Easter Egg Hunt at the Allen County Children's Home.

Mothers were honored at the December Mother-Daughter Banquet, and Valentine's Day was proclaimed "Daddy Date Night." Guest speakers, who discussed specific vocations and homemaking skills, and panel discussions were also included in the program agenda. Last, but very important, was the colorful Sadie Hawkins Dance where the females invited a date and paid for the evening's fun.

Hi-Y men set new standards for well-rounded programs

The Hi-Y is a YMCA sponsored club which is open to any high school boy regardless of his race or religion. Its purpose is: "To create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school, and community high standards of Christian character," and it stresses clean speech, clean sportsmanship, clean scholarship, and clean living.

The Elmhurst Chapter of Hi-Y was quite active. It dealt with personal problems and concerns through club programs, trained members to become good leaders, and gave them experience in responsible citizenship and community service.

The club joined forces with the Y-Teens in a worthwhile service project which aided those living in one of the poorer sections of Fort Wayne. To gain financial backing for the project, the two clubs sponsored a successful record hop. Hi-Y members also sold sweatshirts to help rebuild their own treasury.

Working for a common purpose and fulfilling the Hi-Y goals, members enjoyed a very profitable year.

Projectionists' audio-visual services aid teachers

A group of boys who performed an invaluable service for Elmhurst, but received little recognition, was the Projectionist Club. Under the leadership of their sponsor, Mr. Ethan Gwaltney, the sixteen members donated numerous study halls and lunch periods to assist teachers in audio-visual presentations. President Doug Mignerey was responsible for issuing passes to the boys who were to work, as well as pack films and materials that were ready to be returned. Projectionists were asked to operate record players, film-strip machines, overhead projectors, tape recorders, and 16mm movie projectors.

To continue membership in the club, the boys had to maintain a grade standard equal to the one required of athletes. Operating on the point system, the club agreed to award members one point for each job accomplished. Anyone with fifty points received an emblem, one hundred points qualified the holder for an "E". Members earning 150 points were eligible for a bar on the letter.

Donating their study hall, Doug Mignerey and Woodie Klepfer set up equipment for a scheduled film.

Officers are Marilyn Van Hoozen, treasurer; Diane Abbott, vice-president; Pat Faylor, president; and Connie Spurlock, secretary.

The main purpose of the Commercial Club was to give members an insight of the happenings of the business world. The organization consisted of students participating in commercial or business curriculum. At each meeting a guest speaker, specialized in a specific area, informed members on the numerous opportunities available. Among those included were an insurance salesman, a machine accountant, an attorney at law, a personnel director, and a business college representative. Three hundred points, earned through commercial subjects, meetings, and committee work entitled a club member to a pin. Three hundred fifty points gave a member the commercial club letter.

In April, members, who had attended at least half the regular monthly club meetings, took a field trip. An award banquet marked the end of the year. At this time many members received recognition, and officers for next year were announced. Also, each teacher of a business subject awarded the most outstanding student in that particular subject. Speed and accuracy awards were given in typing and shorthand. Large attendance at club meetings indicated that students recognized the benefits of the club and its programs.

Home Ec Club features girls' homemaking skills, future home preparations

Teaching future homemakers important domestic skills was the purpose fulfilled by the Home Economics Club. Members gained knowledge other than that acquired in daily home ec classes by either attending or taking part in the monthly meetings.

An important event in the fall was the club's fashion show. Girls modeled the stylish outfits which they had worked on so diligently, revealing their talents as a seamstress and entertaining fellow prospective housewives. Interested in serving their community, they made sunshine boxes for children who were long-term patients in the hospital. A shoebox was covered with cheerful material and filled with small gifts.

Guest speakers covered specific areas of home economics. The year's final event was a delicious banquet. There, members were honored for their service to the club, and officers for the coming year were introduced.

Latin is essential for the Junior Classical Club

Officers are Greg Miller, Cathy Cox, Claudia Householder, Elaine Bryson, Lance Feighner. Not present are Barb Barrett and Betsy Pfeiffer.

Any sophomore, junior, or senior student who was taking or had taken Latin was eligible to join Junior Classical League. Activities were all focused around Roman history and ancient Roman customs, and members gained an understanding of culture to supplement their knowledge of the Latin language.

Officers were selected in a unique manner. Participants chose to belong to either the Patrician or the Plebian party. Each party held a nomination convention and at the close of the convention had a slate of officers. Both slates were presented to the club members who voted for one candidate to fill each office. The leaders chosen planned travelogues, a Saturnalia Party at Christmas, and informative discussions. The year's final meeting was the annual Latin Banquet. Members dressed in authentic Roman costumes and were served an elegant full course meal.

Fostering a scientific attitude and helping students to experiment and explore reasons behind scientific phenomena was the main purpose of the Phi-Chem Club.

Field trips and visiting speakers showed how things studied in physics and chemistry were practically applied in industry and everyday life. A demonstration lecture program, titled "The Atomic World," sponsored by the United States Atomic Energy Commission, was presented in mid-October. Subjects covered included atomic structure, the nucleus, radioactivity, radiation biology, and fission and fusion. Members also had the opportunity to tour the Kitco Rubber Works in Bluffton.

The main goal of the members, after bettering their knowledge of sciences, was to obtain a certain number of points for their Indiana Junior Academy of Science pin. A few of the best members received a letter also. Points for a pin and letter were obtained by attending the meetings, participating in field trips, and being on the coke squad. In May, the Phi-Chem Club provided an annual scholarship for the most scientifically inclined members of the club.

Forum and National Forensic League members participate

Officers are Stan Dietzel, secretary-treasurer; Carolynne Ackermann, president; and Dianne Abbott, vice-president.

Elmhurst students who enjoyed public speaking had the opportunity to join Forum. Members took part in inter-scholastic speech meets all over the state and competed in such classifications as poetry interpretation, extemporaneous speaking, oratorical interpretation, original orator, and debate. After a Forum orator had accumulated twenty-five points, he was eligible for membership in National Forensic League, a nation wide honorary speech fraternity. As the speaker gained more points he attained a higher degree in the NFL.

The Forum sponsored its annual Valentines semi-formal, Cupid Capers and the Pen and Annie Dance in May, as well as selling book covers and folders. Faculty sponsors Mr. Kent Kurtz and Miss Susan Glassley aided Forum and NFL members in gaining the poise and self-confidence which is essential to excel in public speaking.

Speakers gained experience that would prove invaluable in the future when they venture into the world.

Elmhurst choir gives members a chance to show their

As a combined class and organization the Elmhurst choir consisted of boy's chorus, girls chorus, and the concert choir. In class students prepared and practiced for recitals. Outside of choir class the group performed for various churches and in the spring they sang for numerous junior high schools. The choir also put on a concert at Christmastime, in the Spring, and one performance with the band.

At the end of the school year an award banquet was held. A letter, a pin, or a pin guard was awarded for a certain number of points, accumulated by participating in various activities, such as attending concerts or by winning an honor in the NISBOVA contest.

Projects, including a carwash, were undertaken to supplement the choir funds. These funds were used to purchase and care for the robes worn by the choir. The choir, as an organization, helped to benefit the individual student, to develop specific talents, and to further his knowledge and enjoyment of music.

Nearly 100 combined their talents to form the largest band in the school's history, and to conduct the year's activities. Representing Elmhurst, the band marched in a city-wide Veterans Day Parade, and in celebration of the opening of the "Landing". They presented a Mid-Winter Concert and combined with the choir to present a Christmas Assembly. Individual talents won medals in the North Indiana Band Orchestra and Vocal Contest. The Annual Spring Concert followed the theme "Sunday in New York."

"A Touch of Blue," and "Mary Poppins" were two of the themes that determined the intricate maneuvers and drills that the marching band, led by drum major and band president Cary Habegger, presented at home football games. The Concert Band gave similar performances at home basketball games. The Orchestra provided the music for My Fair Lady and other special events. The Stage Band performed on radio and television programs and with the band in concert.

Twirlers are talented girls working for perfection

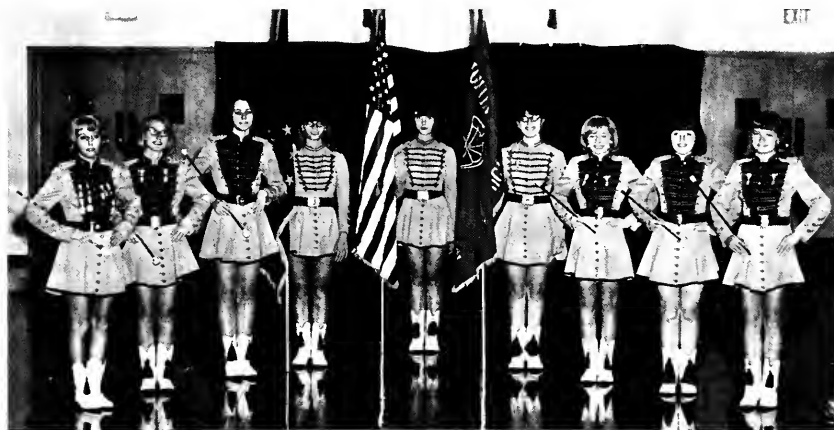

The twirlers, a talented group of girls who strived for precision, added color and excitement to basketball and football games.

Barb McFerran attended Smith-Walbridge Twirling Camp last summer for a week, and Ellen Schinbeckler attended the Midwest Band Camp at Purdue University. The stunts and skills they learned aided these two girls in capably fulfilling their posts of co-captains. With the assistance of the other twirlers, they planned numerous half-time shows which were featured at every home game.

Accompanied by the band, the twirlers presented the colors before each athletic event and displayed their patriotism as they remained before the fans during the singing of the National Anthem. Their routines and drills were the result of many hours of practice and concentration. The girls used their seventh period study halls and sometimes spent time after school perfecting and synchronizing their formations.

Displaying different twirling uniforms for half time entertainment is a much appreciated diversion.

Providing the flag formation for all home basketball and football games is an important task of the twirlers.

Cheerleaders encourage team backing and spirit

Varsity cheerleaders Sharon Smith, Clare Shoaff, Claudia Bolyard, Myra Ping, and Barb Venis display a formation used during basketball season.

Instilling enthusiastic school spirit and leading Elmhurst fans in organized cheering at basketball and football games was the job of the Trojan cheerleaders. For the first time, varsity cheerleaders were chosen in the spring by a panel of six college cheerleaders and the three head coaches. The five girls selected, realized they were given a great responsibility.

Senior co-captains Sharon Smith and Barb Venis, and juniors Clare Shoaff, Myra Ping, and Claudia Bolyard planned numerous pep sessions where the entire student body united and displayed their support for the Trojan teams. They promoted school spirit by placing colorful "booster" signs in the halls, and encouraging game attendance. Their biggest job was to display good sportsmanship, to keep the crowd behaving courteously, and to give the team that extra boost necessary to win the game. Along with the reserve cheerleaders, the girls never tired of saying "Trojans, we're backing you!"

Promoting school spirit and getting students to yell are two of the hardest jobs the cheerleaders have during pep sessions.

Leading the reserve basketball team to victory are reserve cheerleaders Carol Hansen, Leslie Hinton, Mary Beth Marr, and Barb Bourie.

Working together in harmony, varsity and reserve cheerleaders lead the school song, the opening cheer, and hello.

"We're the wheel, we're the hub, we're the Elmhurst Booster Club," chanted the nearly 140 girls who composed the organization responsible for intensifying school spirit at exciting basketball and football games. Meeting each Friday morning before school, members, working with the varsity and reserve cheerleaders, learned the words to spirited cheers and pep songs. This year's uniform for booster girls was a white long-sleeved blouse and red suspenders. It was worn at all home and city series games. Booster Club members worked in the concession stand at home games, selling ice cream and popcorn. The profits were used to purchase new uniforms for the varsity cheerleaders.

Letters and pins were awarded to girls who had earned 150 and 300 points, respectively, but members received the greatest satisfaction by knowing that they were the key promoters of school spirit.

through varied programs

An excellent means of preparing for the teaching vocation was joining the Future Teachers of America. Open to junior and senior students, who were approved by a faculty committee, the club's programs were centered around the responsibilities and importance of teachers. A panel discussion between a new, a retired, and a student teacher offered worthwhile advice to potential educators. Films and guest speakers provided interesting meetings, and members had the chance to be a service worker for those teachers who desired help.

The Ways and Means Committee increased the club's treasury by selling gold and silver Elmhurst charms and by sponsoring a successful Chili Supper before the Elmhurst-Kokomo basketball game. Presenting the faculty with gifts on special holidays was the responsibility of the Project Committee, and the Hospitality Committee provided refreshments at each meeting. The climax of the year came in the Spring, when senior members were given the chance to practice teaching techniques at local elementary and junior high schools during two days of student teaching. Those who qualified secured their first valuable experience in conducting a class.

Comparing ideas and ambitions on teaching as a profession, Linda DeHaven describes to Sandra Dailey the curriculum and the advantages of the college of her choice.

Working diligently, Susie Cole and Cindy Sieminski grade student's papers for service points. This provides experience for future teachers while aiding present teachers.

Organizing constructive plans for the chili supper, a new innovation for raising funds, members choose committees to organize and carry out various portions of the project.

Showing interest in being teachers, FTA members attend an after-school meeting in the cafeteria. Mrs. Decker answers questions and explains the State School Christmas project.

GAA offers enjoyment to its athletic minded members

With physical fitness being the by-word for today's America, Elmhurst offered a complete athletic program for the girls and boys. Participants in the Girls Athletic Association gained rewarding experiences from the organization's activities. Mrs. Lucille Doswell, the sponsor, said, "There is a sport for every girl, and a girl for every sport."

A good deal of emphasis on health, grooming, team spirit, and enthusiasm made the GAA program an outstanding one for the development of a girl's character and sportsmanship.

During the school year GAA offered individual in-door and out-door sports and excursions. A swimming party at the YWCA, horseback riding at a local horse farm, bowling, roller skating, basketball, and volleyball games relieved the tensions of studying and added to the general well-being of the girls.

By taking part in the activities, the girls earned points toward a letter or pin.

Playing shuffleboard in the girl's gym are Jolene Wilhelm, Janet Freiburger, Jean Ham, and Chris Sieminski.

An organization which was regarded with great prestige was the Elmhurst Lettermen's Club. Boys gained membership by earning a required number of points in any varsity sport. The club set a precedent by having a week of initiation for all new members in November, and while providing active members with pieces of candy, the initiates were heard reciting:

"Mighty E-man thou art great Mighty E-man cast my fate . . ."

Special recognition was given to the hardworking athletes as Friday was declared Lettermen's Day and club members wore their letter sweaters. Projects varied from transporting Christmas gifts to the Johnny Appleseed Home to sponsoring a spring car wash. The final event was an April dance which featured the crowning of Elmhurst's most "admired" athlete.

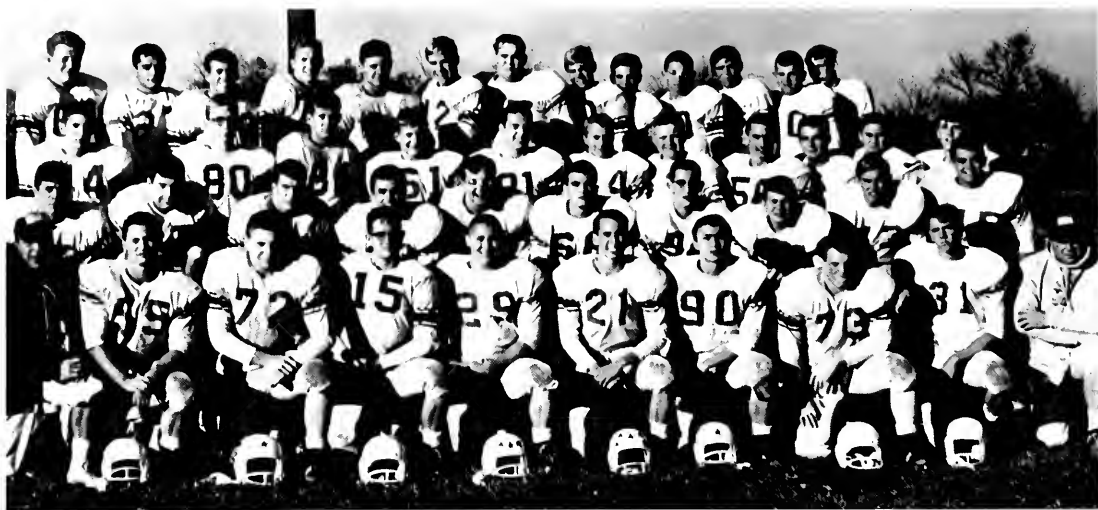

CONFLICT

A novel is not complete without a conflict. Each athletic contest between the mighty Trojans and their opponents played a part in comprising the conflict of The New Elmhurst. Autumn weekends were characterized by exciting football games, some played in a brisk breeze, others played in an incessant downpour. Vibrant crowds yelled "Hold that line!" as the opposition neared their goal. Skilled harriers brought glory to the halls of EHS by capturing city honors in cross country. Avid fans followed the Trojan basketball team and carried their enthusiasm away as well as home games. An innovation on the sports scene this year at Elmhurst was wrestling, open to boys of any age and weight. The team appeared very skillful considering it was their first year of action and showed a promising future. Boys who excelled in golf and track had the opportunity to confront city and area teams in the spring meets. Track team members were adept in various fields of competition.

The outcome of Trojan contests was not always a victory, but win or lose, EHS students backed their team, using as their motto, "We're the Trojans, couldn't be prouder!"

Fighting to a 0—0 tie with Bishop Luers, Greg Jackson and Fred Strauss combine to bring down a Knight, initially hit by Bruce Wolfe.

Elmhurst's gridders started the 1965 football season with two quick victories and it looked as if the Trojans would be important figures in the city race. Snider's Panthers, in their infant season, were the first to fall before the "Men of Troy" by a 27—7 count. Elmhurst then defeated Concordia 21—13. The Trojans suffered their first attack at the hands of Central Catholic by a 14—0 tally. Bishop Luer's Knights were able to hold the Trojans to a scoreless tie. Elmhurst bombed Decatur Yellow Jackets 32—12 in the Red and Gray's only non-city competition. In what was considered by many to be the big game of Elmhurst's schedule, the Trojans were disappointed by South Side, suffering a 28—14 loss. Following the Archer game, the Trojans were shut out twice in a row; they were edged by Central 6—0 and by North Side 13—0. However, fired up for their last game, the gridders smeared the Bishop Dwenger Saints with a 33—13 record.

Lead by Rush Bush and Mark Merchant with 49 and 24 points respectively, the Trojans achieved a 4—4—1 record, the best account in Elmhurst history. However, a factual record cannot serve as a basis for a true evaluation of a football season. Even in defeat invaluable experience was gained that would not have been learned under any other circumstances.

Reserve Trojan footballers received considerable attention due to the fact that they compiled an impressive record of six wins and two losses in city competition; they also won two junior varsity games. Two controlling factors of this successful season were coaches Jerry Bush and Darrell Heaston who each contributed immensely to the impressive style of play which the reserves continuously exhibited.

Several reserve gridgers were outstanding in their display of drive and determination. One such gridder was Greg Zeysing, halfback, who was the leading reserve scorer, totaling 37 points during the 1965 gridiron season. Next in line were Gary Zion, end, Kirk Gemple, fullback, and John Hoover, quarterback, who scored 18, 13, and 12 points, respectively. The rest of the scoring was evenly distributed between numerous other boys.

Overall, the 1965 reserve team was unified and well-balanced. The two consecutive winning reserve teams promised an experienced team for next year's varsity gridiron.

Giving one of the many "chalk talks" essential to a winning football team, reserve coach Jerry Bush reviews an important play.

The nucleus of the 1965 Trojan cross country team consisted, almost exclusively, of underclassmen. These harriers were piloted by head mentor Don Kemp. Under Coach Kemp's supervision, the Trojan runners coasted to a brilliant record of 16 wins and only a single defeat. The six individuals who spearheaded this year's team were Ron Blaettner, John Capin, John Haynes, Jim Gerichs, Harry Ausderan, and John Kunberger.

Throughout the season, junior Ron Blaettner improved—until he reached his best time of 9:54.1. John Capin and John Haynes followed with times of 10:08 and 10:13, respectively.

Led by Ron Blaettner, the spirited Trojan harriers sprinted their way to an admiral finish in the 1965 Cross Country Sectional meet, second only to North Side.

Elmhurst distancemen are to be recommended for their exceptional showing at the Regional meet. John Haynes ran a commendable race, pacing the Trojan team to a coveted fourth place in regional competition.

Only a narrow 28—27 loss to the North Side reserves spoiled their flawless season. The biggest shellacking that the reserve gave out was a 15—50 complete sweep against Bishop Dwenger.

The by-products of this tremendous season are several runners who emerged as fine prospects for the 1966-67 varsity cross country team. Two prospects, Carl Cook and Burt Baker, registered best times of 11:12 and 11:15 respectively.

The 1965—66 edition of "Hoosier Hysteria" was initiated in fine style; the new Bishop Dwenger Saints falling prey to the Trojans, 57—41. The ball-hawking Trojans quickly notched their second win by overpowering Concordia, 58—52. An upset-minded Bishop Luers five rallied in the final moments for a slim victory, 53—52. Elmhurst retaliated against Snider, 69—56, sporting four players in double figures. Playing one of their best games of the season against Ossian, the roundballers dropped them 61—55. The Trojans were 72—46 victims of state ranked Central. In this year's Holiday Tourney, the hard-court men lost to a strong Columbia City team and a lesser known Lakeland quintet by scores of 69—58 and 61—59, respectively. The hoopers fared Muncie South Side and Kokomo in successive nights, losing the two games by respective scores of 66—54 and 87—50. Coach Geyer's basketballers defeated Bluffton 65—62, holding off a 14 point Bluffton rally. The Trojans completed a three game roadtrip bowing to Warsaw, 64—55 and South Side, 65—53. Then the varsity squad began a winning streak by defeating Decatur, 87—44 and Central Catholic, 74—69 in games that were highlighted by good shooting and individual efforts. Elmhurst won a surprisingly close battle with the Berne Bears downing them 74—72 in overtime. The Huntington Vikings dealt the Geyermen their only defeat, 80—69, in the final seven games of the season. The cagemen played two of their best and most spirited games connecting for .456 and .529 field goal percentages as they dumped North Side, 67—66 and New Haven, 70—60. The Trojans finished the regular season to the tune of a 83—63 victory over Kendallville. Elmhurst trailed only Central and South Side in city competition as Greg Robers and Dan Starnes made all-city first string.

Despite defensive pressure, junior guard Gary Rickner gets off a shot that helped overpower the Irish.

The efforts of reserve coach Mr. Ken Eytcheson and hours of hard, diligent practice resulted in a highly respectable 14—6 record.

The initial contest against Concordia finished with Elmhurst on top 39—37 as Gary McClintick scored 20 points. In a close second game Bishop Luers won 37—35 in overtime. The roundballers squeezed by Snider 46—44. The reserves continued winning with triumphs over Ossian and Central by 48—34 and 48—41 counts, respectively. Wins over Columbia City 59—42 and North Side 42—36 enabled the reserves to bring home the Holiday Tourney championship. The Trojans defeated Muncie South Side 44—38, and Kokomo fell 50—42. Despite Dan Walden's 18 points, Bluffton tripped Elmhurst 38—35, but in the next game the reserve hoopers mastered Warsaw 55—44. Against Bishop Dwenger Rick Hoopes accounted for 23 tallies, as the Saints were mauled 50—35. Falling short of South Side 58—40, Greg Zeysing's 18 points the following night led the Trojans over Decatur 64—31. Central Catholic and Berne lost to the "B" team by 50—40 and 47—40, respectively. However, three disappointing losses followed 42—34, 58—35, and 48—43 scores to Huntington, North Side, and New Haven, respectively. The closing game against Kendallville was won by the Trojans 52—38.

Gary McClintick stretches high over Concordia opponents to score a basket as the reserves won their second victory of the season.

Vaulting above his opponent for an easy two points, sophomore Gary Hale scores in an after-school contest with Central Catholic.

Explaining several plays to his squad during a time out in the Concordia game is reserve coach Ken Eytcheson.

Contemplating his next move, Pete Mayclin circles his South Side competitor waiting for an opportunity to catch him off guard.

Matmen drop Kendallville

46—5 for initial victory

Keeping pace with The New Elmhurst, Mr. Jerry Bush introduced the sport of wrestling to the otherwise complete family of Elmhurst varsity sports. Thirty-two boys responded to the challenge offered by this new Trojan sport. Pioneer letter winners Bert Baker, Dale Bender, Laune Mason, Mark Feighner, Steve Elonza, Pete Mayclin, Mark Merchant, Jim Selzer, Steve Rondot, Ken Hoemig, Mike McFadden, Dave Carter, Rick Meyers, Stan Dietzel, Steve Yentes, and Bruce Wolfe were coached by Mr. Bush and managed by Dave Hall. The Trojan grapplers experienced an initial season comprised of one win and thirteen losses, not including the commendable third place honors they earned in the Central Catholic Invitational Meet.

According to Mr. Bush the enthusiastic wrestlers made satisfactory performance in the meets and progressed throughout the season despite what the won-loss record indicated. He is looking forward to next year when he expects everyone back except seniors Bruce Wolfe and Joe Omo.

Junior grappler, Dave Carter, lunges into his Central opponent in an effort to offset the chance of being scored upon.

Cindermen provide good showing at Bloomington relays

Attempting to clear the bar, junior Bert Baker shows the form necessary for a successful high jump.

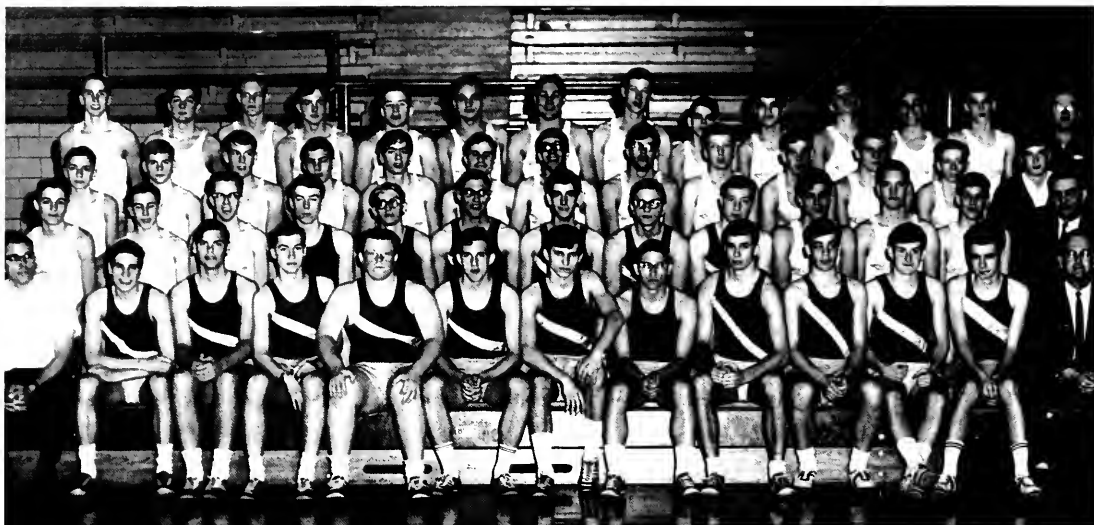

Trying to keep an eye on everything, Coach Kemp advises distancemen John Capin and John Flager during a track meet against Concordia and Bishop Luers.

By putting forth tremendous effort, sophomore Dan Kraft gains every possible inch in a long jump.

Weeks of rigid training yield good track outlook

The 1965-1966 "cinder season" welcomed the efforts of many returning lettermen, as well as the promising abilities of numerous talented sophomores.

Following pre-season practices which were heavily concentrated for each individual event, Trojans weathered the season's initial test as they journeyed to the annual Bloomington Relays. No team is complete without its coaches, and Trojans can boast of a coaching staff which is well qualified and extremely enthusiastic. For the second consecutive year, the activities of the entire track team were engineered by head coach Mr. Don Kemp. Working as his associates were Mr. Glen Miller and Mr. Elden Stoops, who rendered isolated help for field events and dashes, respectively.

During a triangular meet with Central and Snider, sophomore Rick Hoopes clears the bar, set at 5'8".

Using his last burst of energy, junior Russ Bush finishes the 100 yard dash in the triangular meet with Snider and Central.

Sophomore hurdler Galen Brown takes flight in a first of the year high sticks battle with Central and Snyder.

Determination, stamina, and the will to win shows on Russ Bush's face as he nears the finish.

Displaying the form used in his record-breaking vault of 12'6", senior Terry Kimbel soars over the bar during practice.

Talking with the Central Catholic coach is Coach Kurtz in the first match of the tennis season which Elmhurst won, 5—2.

Despite losing four of last year's top five players and the return of only two seniors, the tennis coach Mr. Kent Kurtz, looked forward to a winning season; the racket squad's first in three years.

Only Will McMahan, Larry Wilson, and Cary Habegger on this year's team have tasted previous varsity competition. Other members include Gary Rickner, John Miller, Bruce Jennings, Mark Merchant, Bob Noble, John Grieser, and Stan Dietzel.

The netmen's schedule consists of matches against regular foes, North Side, South Side, Central, Central Catholic, Concordia, and Howe Military. New matches include Bishop Luers, Bluffton, Warsaw, and Lakeland.

Returning a shot with adequate power to win the point is senior Will McMahan in the match against Central Catholic.

Bruce Jennings, junior tennis squad member, warms up before the initial game of the 1966 season with Central Catholic.

Cary Habegger makes a difficult forehand return as he adds his part to a doubles match held at the Tennis Center.

Returning, fresh linksmen anticipate prime season

The linksmen lost only two members from the 1965 season through graduation, and the 1966 squad stood with a balanced four seniors, four juniors, and two sophomores. Mr. Nick Werling, coach of the golf team, anticipated a good season. Seniors Jack Heavrin and Jim Merkey were the only two returning lettermen. Also participating on the golf team were Rick Hinton, Bruce Wolfe, Steve Bowers, Lonny Fry, Jerry Guebard, Dave Hall, Dick Bradow, and Ned Ewing.

A new team added to the schedule of twenty-two matches was Snider High School.

Competition for first man was stiff. As Coach Werling said, "Only four strokes stood between the first and the tenth man."

Senior letterman Jim Merkey exemplifies the sportsmanship present in golf as he stands quietly awaiting an opponents shot.

Jerry Guebard watches with anticipation a chip shot as it heads for the second hole of the Brookwood Golf Course.

Hoping for a successful chip shot, Jack Heavrin swings the golf club for a stroke that will get his ball out of the sand trap.

During practice Jim Merkey blasts his way out of a sand trap, one of the hazards among many faced by golfers.

Among his many other duties, Coach Werling instructs senior Bruce Wolfe on improving his grip to increase his driving yardage.

LEAD CHARACTERS

"It is one of the most beautiful compensations of life that no man can sincerely try to help another without helping himself."

Ralph W. Emerson

This novel is being written as a tribute to the The New Elmhurst. It is bound to be successful since the success of a novel is usually generated by the characters which dominate its theme.

Molding the character of 1,200 people is not an easy task. Being leaders themselves, the faculty created leaders. Intelligence (for over three fourths held their master's degrees), integrity, and most of all dedication were the outstanding qualities of the Elmhurst faculty. They created an educational environment and set goals for students to follow.

Here's to the Elmhurst faculty—we thank you.

A part of Mr. Eickhoff's day is spent on the telephone. He is talking to a parent about a schedule change.

Faithfully serving Elmhurst for nine years, Mr. Eickhoff, head administrator, performs many duties as principal from behind his desk.

Credit for the efficient operation of Elmhurst rested in the hands of the administration. Mr. Charles Eickhoff, principal since 1957, was constantly occupied with the duties which rest with the head of any institution. His responsibilities were both tedious and numerous, but he personally saw to it that each job was accomplished. His secretary, Mrs. Julia Shaw assisted him in making sure that the school ran smoothly. Mrs. Grace Pennington, Mr. Robert Zimmerman, and Mr. Douglas Spencer, Elmhurst's three guidance counselors, aided students in choosing a college or a vocation. Mr. Spencer served as the athletic director as well. Secretary to these three faculty members, Mrs. Jean Sark kept the permanent record files in order, and Mrs. Pearl Hardy was depended upon to take care of financial matters. Assuming the important post of Dean of Girls was Miss Ruth Wimmer. In addition to offering advice to the girls, she taught chemistry classes. As a result of the hard work and excellent administration, The New Elmhurst became a reality.

Assisting Mr. Zimmerman, Mrs. Sark looks through the permanent record file in the guidance office.

Administration, guidance

Even though Mrs. Shaw, secretary to Mr. Eickhoff has many hectic duties to fulfill, she still keeps Elmhurst running smoothly.

Keeping books and organizing Elmhurst's financial report, Mrs. Hardy, treasurer, assumes her many responsibilities.

Mr. Grile, Superintendent of Fort Wayne Community Schools, is busy with the problems of the school system.

Always ready and willing to lend her services whenever needed, Miss Wimmer, Dean of Girls, assumes the duties in her new office.

staff successfully care for 'The New Elmhurst'

Activities of Mr. Spencer, athletic director and guidance counselor, range from helping coaches to assisting students with schedules.

Mr. Zimmerman, guidance counselor, introduces one of the featured guest speakers in an assembly.

Showing Jo Ann Kissinger one of the many available pamphlets of the surrounding colleges is Mrs. Pennington, Elmhurst's guidance counselor.

CHARACTERS

Elmhurst High School, as a building was very new, but even more alive and new was the spirit that flowed through her halls—the spirit of her students.

The underclassmen of Elmhurst, comprised of sophomores and juniors, were forever moving forward—closer to that coveted position as seniors and to their high school graduation.

The juniors gained more confidence and leadership in school activities. Their's was the voice of initiative and incentive that was heard again and again. The sophomores became accustomed to the determination and perseverance that were necessary to be successful in senior high school.

Spirit was shown in the number of students participating in reserve sports. This included the underclass spectators who turned out in droves to cheer their teams and the spunky cheerleaders who led the thunderous yells.

Sophomores and juniors, spurred by their skills and interests, added enthusiasm and talent to the numerous EHS clubs. The production of "My Fair Lady" could never have been the huge success that it was without the help and support of Elmhurst underclassmen.

In academics these bright students earned grades good enough to retain consistent positions on the honor roll.

Elmhurst salutes its underclassmen—whose strength and potential was the foundation of the school and the foundation of tomorrow's world.

As prospective college applicants, juniors take the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test, and the National Merit Scholarship Test which are given at Elmhurst. These tests prepare underclassmen for final college entrance exams taken as seniors.

CLIMAX

The action of a novel rises to a final high point, the climax. In much the same way, a student's high school career reaches the summit on the night of graduation; however, one's entire senior year is an exciting close to his high school days at The New Elmhurst.

Preparations for graduation began in the summer as Trojans had their senior pictures taken. The beginning of school brought such events as the election of class officers, the selection of a minister to deliver the baccalaureate sermon, and the choice of cap and gown colors. Throughout the year, seniors crowded the guidance office, making plans for college or future vocations and receiving their anticipated board scores. Anxiety prevailed as members of the Class of 1966 awaited the announcement of their valedictorian and salutatorian, and praise was offered to those who were inducted into the National Honor Society.

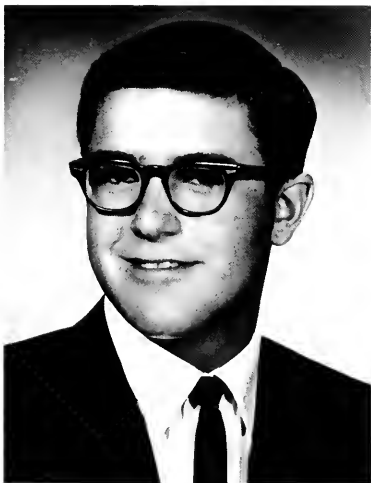

The Senior Banquet was an enjoyable and memorable evening for all who attended it, and was followed by the final break from high school, commencement. As seniors proceeded down the aisle to receive their diplomas, they left behind a wonderful phase of their life and took a step into the future. But no matter what path of life they chose to follow, they will never forget the contributions which Elmhurst High School has made to their teen-age years.

Outstanding seniors receive scholastic recognition

Beverly Bleeker
Valedictorian

Greg Pease
Salutatorian

In every novel there are a number of characters who stand out because of admirable traits or abilities which they possess. Likewise, many members of the senior class excelled in various aspects of school life and were honored for their achievements.

Beverly Bleeker earned the coveted position of valedictorian and Greg Pease attained the title of salutatorian.

Thirty-four Trojans were awarded membership in National Honor Society. These students had to rank in the upper tenth of their class and were to excel in scholarship, service, leadership, and character. Honored at a banquet in early May, the inducted members received membership pins and cards.

Quill and Scroll, an honorary high school journalism society, received twelve members for their valuable contribution to the publications department; and several senior athletes were named to the National Athletic Scholarship Society.

Those who received honors did so as the result of numerous hours of concentration and devotion to a specific goal. They combined scholarship with honesty, reliability, cordiality, cooperation, and loyalty to be recognized as the leaders of the Class of 1966.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We, the co-editors and staff, wish to express our sincere appreciation to everyone who helped make the 1966 Anlibrum possible. Our deepest gratitude goes to Mr. Don Lemish, publications advisor, for his guidance and assistance. Many thanks to Mr. Lemish and other staff members who spent numerous evenings completing pages for a deadline.

We are grateful to Mr. Charles Eickhoff, principal, for his complete cooperation in producing the book. We thank the faculty members for granting us privileges throughout the year. The guidance office often provided us with information that was greatly appreciated.

Receiving credit for the photography are Jerry Warner, Tim Green, Rex Gray, and Mark Ross. Mr. Paul Watters and Mr. John Dall, both of Watters Studio, Fort Wayne, who took special pictures and processed all photographs, are to be commended for their admirable work.

Recognition goes to Mr. Lemish for helping us with the final cover design and to Pat Bir for drawing the trojan used on division pages. Others who helped to create this yearbook are Mr. Jim Arthur, our consultant with American Yearbook Company, our publisher, in Hannibal, Missouri; Mr. Paul Watters, Watters Studio, for making senior and faculty portraits; Mr. Jerry Crim, Indiana School Pictures, for making underclass portraits; and S. K. Smith Company for producing the cover. Special thanks goes to Indiana and Michigan Electric Company for the use of its "cherry picker" to take the aerial photo of the school.
